

Becoming a Culturally Competent Workplace

with Lee Mun Wah & John Lenssen

In this unique workshop and training, participants will learn that cultural competency requires not only an awareness of cross-cultural differences, but also many other competencies such as cross-cultural communications skills, community development and an awareness of social issues and contexts.

Building upon the “Cultural Competency for Leaders” training held in Eugene, OR, in May of 2008, participants will learn by way of film, role plays and experiential exercises:

- How to ask culturally appropriate questions
- Ways to create a sense of community from a diverse population
- To notice the importance of intent and impact
- How to mediate conflicts that are cultural in nature

Wednesday, February 18, 2009 • 8:30 am ~ 4:00 pm

Location: Lane Community College, Center for Meeting & Learning
4000 East 30th Avenue Eugene, OR 97405
Site Phone: 541-463-5585

Fee: $150 ($75 for students/elected officials)

* If 4 from the same organization register, the 5th registration is free *

For more information: Elizabeth Sadhu, elizabethsadhu@yahoo.com or 541-914-3420 and Dennis Carr carrd@lanecc.edu

Lee Mun Wah is a nationally acclaimed lecturer and Master Diversity & Communications Trainer, community therapist, documentary filmmaker, Special Education educator, performing poet, Asian folk-teller and author. He is also Director of StirFry Seminars & Consulting.

John Lenssen is a facilitator, trainer, and consultant working primarily with school districts and public organizations on issues of cultural competency, diversity, conflict, civil rights, intercultural communication, leadership and change. He is also an adjunct faculty member at the University of Oregon, Lewis and Clark College, and Pacific University teaching graduate courses on diversity and cultural competency.

Hosted by Lane County Human Resource Association and Lane Community College