Analysis and Action: High school students enrolled in Lane's College Now Program earn lower division academic transfer and entry level professional technical course credits that also satisfy high school graduation requirements. College Now is part of a planned effort to achieve a learning continuum that starts in high school and extends through the second year at the community college, and if a student chooses, on to a four-year university. College Now classes are taught by college-approved high school teachers using college course outlines and college textbooks.

Note: Registration fee for College Now courses was discontinued at the start of the 2004-05 academic year.
